NJASA Supports Senate President Codey's Efforts

Trenton, NJ August 25, 2008.....The New Jersey Association of School Administrators (NJASA), representing school leaders throughout the state, expects that New Jersey's educators earn degrees only from accredited colleges and universities where accepted academic standards have been established and validated.

NJASA Executive Director Richard Bozza said, "The Association supports the request of Senate President Richard Codey for the Commissioner of Education to review the credentials of school administrators."

On behalf of the Association, Bozza added, "NJASA encourages Commissioner Lucille Davy to examine the credentials of all professional employees holding teaching, educational services, and administrative certificates to ensure that the highest standards are being met by professionals serving New Jersey students."
